

HST (History)

- HST 1003 Survey of Western Civilization Three hours
A brief survey of the history of western civilization from ancient times to the present with greater attention given to those cultures which were more formative in the development of western civilization.
Offered each semester
- HST 1093H Honors: Survey of Western Civilization Three hours
A brief survey of the history of western civilization from ancient times to the present focusing on major issues and turning points. Prerequisite: admission to the Honors Program or permission of the Honors Committee
Offered fall semester
- HST 2113 United States History to 1865 Three hours
A survey of American political, social, and economic history from the colonial era through the Civil War.
Offered fall semester (odd-numbered years)
- HST 2123 United States History since 1865 Three hours
A survey of American political, social, and economic history from the reconstruction era to the present.
Offered spring semester (even-numbered years)
- HST 2213 German History Three hours
A survey of German history from medieval times to the present focusing particularly on why Germany has repeatedly failed to follow the more organized and democratic examples of England and France. Prerequisite: HST 1003 or consent of instructor
Offered spring semester (upon sufficient request)
- HST 2223 Russian History Three hours
A survey of Russian history from medieval times to the present focusing particularly on the issue of Russia's authoritarian political structures. Prerequisite: HST 1003 or consent of instructor
Offered spring semester (upon sufficient request)
- HST 2233 English History Three hours
A survey of English history from medieval times to the present focusing particularly on England's political and constitutional developments. Prerequisite: HST 1003 or consent of instructor
Offered spring semester (upon sufficient request)
- HST 2413 Arkansas History Three hours
A study of the political, social, and economic development of Arkansas from the era of exploration and early statehood to the present. Major themes include the Civil War and Reconstruction, segregation and disenfranchisement, the one-party experience, progressivism, the struggle for democracy, and civil rights. Meets state requirements for elementary and secondary teachers.
Offered upon request (internet course)
- HST 3153 United States Intellectual History Three hours
A study of the history of ideas in America from the colonial period to the present. Emphasis is placed on the reading of primary documents by American thinkers.
Offered spring semester (odd-numbered years)

HST 3213 World History in the Twentieth Century Three hours

A study which begins with the close of World War I and continues to the fall of Communism. Topics addressed include Nazi Germany, the Cold War, NATO, the Common Market, the resurgence of Western Europe as a power bloc, and the rise of the third world.

Offered fall semester (even-numbered years)

HST 3313 World War II Three hours

A study of the causes and events of the Second World War. Students are also involved in a detailed simulation of the major factors in the war.

Offered fall semester (upon sufficient request)

HST 3323 History of Warfare Three hours

A survey of the major trends in the history of armed conflict focusing particularly on how and why each civilization has its own unique "way of war." Students are also involved in some detailed simulations of some of the major battles in European history.

Offered fall semester (upon sufficient request)

HST 3413 Selected Topics Three hours

Special topics in History are considered.

Offered upon sufficient request

HST 4003 American Studies Three hours

A capstone of the University Core Curriculum tracing some of the major themes in the social, religious, and political life of the United States. Prerequisites: EGL 1023, ECN 2002, HST 1003, POL 2003

Offered each semester

HST 4093H Honors: American Studies Three hours

A survey of significant ideas that have influenced American religious, social, political, and economic life since the early 1600s. The historical impact of these ideas is critically assessed using an integrative, Biblical world view framework. Prerequisites: EGL 1023, ECN 2002, HST 1003, and POL 2003 (or Honors counterparts), and admission to the Honors Program or permission of the Honors Committee

Offered fall semester

HST 4511, 4512, 4513 Independent Study One to three hours

Supervised exploration of topics of special interest to the student. The course consists of large assignments of supervised reading, regular consultation with the supervising professor, and written analysis of readings. Prerequisites: 15 hours of history and consent of the history department

Offered upon sufficient request

HST 4613 Seminar in United States History Three hours

An introduction to methods of historical research, philosophies of history, and the relationship between the study of history and a Christian world view. Students research a particular topic in U.S. history. Prerequisites: consent of instructor and nine hours of history

Offered fall semester (even-numbered years)